KAISER'S POWER SMASHED, SAYS GERMANY IN NEW PEACE NOTE

DANIELS SCORES G. O. P. CHIEFS

How a man may do two entirely different and distinct things at the same time is being illustrated today by Josephus Daniels. As Secretary of the Navy he has no interest in, and declines to discuss, politics. As one of the leaders of the Democratic party he declines to comment on the navy. And yet at the same time in his suite at the Copley-Plaza today he greeted naval officers and local Democratic leaders.

"I am glad to meet you gentlemen on the eve of our great victory," he said in greeting the entire gathering, thus showing now a born diplomat can in one sentence convey two entirely different meanings. The Democratic leaders knew he referred to the election of their ticket here; and the naval officers knew that he also referred to the European situation.

Turning to Admiral Wood he said: "Politics has no place in the navy, and I am going to devote the morning to the navy."

Facing Richard H. Long, Democratic candidate for Governor, he said: "The

BRAVES SAVED FROM BLOCK BY GAFFNEY

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

James E. Gaffney, one time owner of the Boston Braves and at present chief owner of Braves Field, today rescued the bondholders of the Commonwealth Realty Trust from the slough of despond. Mr. Gaffney deposited with the Old Colony Trust Company a certified check for $15,500, assuring the bondholders of the payment on their coupons on Friday, two months after they were due.

Thus Mr. Gaffney does what the owners of the baseball club have so far failed to do. His payment today would prevent the formation of a committee of bondholders, subsequent auction of the plant and a direct loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to bondholders and others. Today Mr. Gaffney and his attorney, John Conway Toole, were positively assured that neither Arthur C. Wise nor any

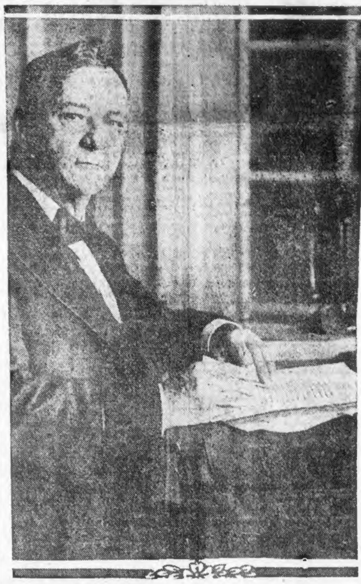
DANIELS OPENING A BUSY DAY IN BOSTON



After a few hours rest at the Copley-Plaza, the Secretary of the Navy was up bright and early today and plunged into mail awaiting him. The Secretary, however, paused for a moment for the AMERICAN photographer, just as a favor from a former newspaper worker to one still in the harness.

MOTHERLESS, SENDS SMILE TO DADDY

He was little, and brown and very, very sober as to eye. His gray overcoat, with a black band across the sleeve, told the world of a bereavement that is causing his little heart to ache. 138,000 Prisoners on Western Front in October

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 30.—Thirty thousand prisoners have been captured on the Belgian front since September 28, the British War Office announced today in a statement dealing with operations on that sector of the western battle zone.

Between October 14 and 27 509 guns were taken.

The statement follows:

"Prisoners taken on the Belgian front between October 14 and 27 total 18,492. From September 27 they total over 30,000. The booty is so great that it has not yet been enumerated. From October 14 to 27 509 guns were taken, of which 110 were of heavy calibre and 48 were employed for coast defence. The machine guns number upward of 1,200."

The prisoners taken by the allies on the whole western front in October total 138,288, it was learned by the International News Service this afternoon. The captured guns were estimated at 2,085.

U. S. TROOPS IN GREAT BATTLE IN ITALY

By International News Service

London, Oct. 30.—Twenty thousand Austro-Hungarians had been captured in the new offensive on the Italian front up to last night, it was announced today. The advance is continuing.

American troops from Ohio already are taking part in the great battle now raging, in which the allies have progressed ten miles over a forty-mile front, said a Milan dispatch to the Telegraph.

The offensive is progressing rapidly and many villages have been liberated.

When King Victor Emmanuel crossed the Piave River with his soldiers he was cheered by the allied troops and the Austrian prisoners that were passing to the rear.

The Italians are now less than ten miles from Vittorio, the chief Austrian base.

Monte Piar and Monte Perlo, two heights of great strategic importance, have been captured.

The same day Christmas parcel stations will be opened by practically all the branches of the chapter. No cartons will be given out before Friday.

Morgenthau Is for Armed Occupation of Turkey

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 30.—"The allies must make a military occupation of Turkey, and the Turks must open the Dardanelles to the world," were put forth today by Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, as peace conditions for the Ottoman government.

Mr. Morgenthau is in Nebraska to aid in the senatorial campaign of former Governor Morehead, Democrat, who is opposing Senator Norris, Republican.

ALLIES SHELL HUNGARY AT THE DANUBE

London, Oct. 30.—Allied artillery has begun to bombard Hungary. The allies have reached the Danube River at the Iron Gate and are throwing shells across the stream against Hungarian positions on the northern bank. The Iron Gate is a bend in the Danube at the point where the river begins to form the boundary between Hungary and Rumania.

BULLETINS!

Copenhagen, Oct. 30.—The Kaiser considers Germany's position hopeless and is prepared to abdicate, according to a report reaching here from Berlin today. The Kaiser is reported to have reached this decision following a meeting of the leaders of the various German states.

Copnhagen, Oct. 30.—Travelers from Germany declared today that a definite statement regarding the abdication of the Kaiser may be forthcoming within twenty-four hours.

Zurich, Oct. 30.—A state of siege has been proclaimed at Budapest, and German troops from Austria are being rushed there to put down the disorders, according to information from Vienna today. Demonstrators at Budapest marched through the streets cheering and demanding a republic.

London, Oct. 30.—It was reported from a Swiss source today that Count Andrassy, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, had decided to open direct negotiations with Italy.

Copenhagen, Oct. 30.—Announcement was made in Berlin today that General Groener had succeeded General Ludendorff as first quartermaster-general of the German army.

London, Oct. 30.—The capitulation of Turkey is imminent and the armistice terms have already been prepared, it was learned on high authority today.

Zurich, Oct. 30.—The Montenegrin revolutionaries have entered Cetinje, the capital of the country, it was learned today.

RECITES REFORMS BY BERLIN GOVERNMENT

Washington, Oct. 30.—An entirely new peace note from Germany was received by the State Department today. The new communication sets forth that the German government is awaiting armistice terms from the entente and recites government reforms which have taken place in Germany recently. Its tenor is that the Kaiser has been relieved of his power to make war or declare peace without the support of the German people. The memorandum, unlike the notes that preceded it, is not addressed to the President, but is sent to the State Department merely as a communication from the German government to the United States.

TURKS GIVE UP BAKU WITHOUT A STRUGGLE

London, Oct. 30.—The Turks have evacuated Baku without putting up a fight, said a Zurich dispatch this morning. Buka is in the Caucasus and is an important port on the Caspian Sea.

By FLOYD MacGRIFF,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Oct. 30.—The terms upon which Germany can have an armistice and also peace will be made known very soon. The terms have been agreed on by the Versailles inter-allied war council, it was learned here today.

The peace and armistice terms will be issued simultaneously. The peace conditions, it is understood, will be President Wilson's fourteen points in a little different form. The wording will be slightly adjusted so as to embody new conditions which have arisen within the past year.

London believes Germany undoubtedly will accept both the armistice and peace terms. It is known that Germany really has been trying to stop the operations of her U-boats.

Austria is expected to accept any terms that are offered her. The fact that the Czecho-Slavs and the Jugo-Slavs control Austria's food supply has played a large part in forcing the capitulation of Germany's chief ally. Austria, it is believed, will quickly

ALIEN CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED BRIBERY

John Colbert, thirty-three, of Larvin street, Roxbury, was taken before U. S. Commissioner Hayes today, charged with attempting to bribe an agent of the Department of Justice. Colbert is a German alien enemy. An agent was looking into his registration last June when, he alleges, Colbert offered and gave him $10 not to press the investigation.

Drastic Armistice Terms Will Be Imposed by Versailles Council

Washington, Oct. 30.—Though no official announcement has yet been made of the armistice terms to be offered Germany, the substance of the conditions agreed upon by the Inter-Allied War Council, in session at Versailles, has become known here. The terms are in effect:

1—The disarming of all German forces.

2—The immediate evacuation of all occupied territories by German soldiers.

3—Cessation of work at all munition plants in Germany and the occupation of these by Allied forces.

4—Surrender of all archives of the German High Command dealing with plans for the war.

5—Surrender of Metz, Strassburg and other frontier fortifications and the occupation of these by Allied soldiers.

6—Immediate release of all Allied soldiers held prisoners in Germany.

7—Dismantling of all wireless on German warships and the dismissal of all crews, except such men as must be kept to maintain the fires under the boilers and prevent the ruin of the vessels.

8—An accounting for and disarming of all submarines, with the surrender of a specified number of the boats.

9—The raising of all mine blockades.

10—Occupation by American and Allied forces of Heligoland and other sea fortresses and the free passage through the Kiel Canal for all Allied warships.

Washington Hears Rumor That Wilson Has Forwarded Terms of an Armistice

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.

Washington, Oct. 30.—Reports were in circulation in certain quarters here today that President Wilson already had sent forward to Germany the terms of the armistice agreed upon at Versailles. But there was absolutely no confirmation. When the question was put directly to State Department officials they said they could not say anything at all about the matter.

It was intimated that there would be no concealment of any terms agreed on, although it also was explained that it was unlikely they would be made public in advance of their actual delivery to Berlin.

It was stated that owing to the delicate nature of the present negotiations, it was necessary that there be no premature publication of matters that were still subject to debate.

It can be stated on authority that so far as the President is concerned he will completely indorse all demands that are made by the military advisors at the Versailles council designed to guarantee that Germany will keep all pledges made.

The President, it is understood, made it very plain to the cabinet when the entire situation was under discussion, that he believed "Germany's teeth must be drawn," and that she be made submissive to any and all demands that are made upon her.

Officials today had no information regarding whether the armistice conditions would be accompanied by an outline of the peace terms that Germany will be forced to accept. The majority of officials here were inclined to hope that this would be done. They explained that inasmuch as Germany must in effect surrender unconditionally to secure an armistice, she might just as well know what she will have to do to get peace.

Meanwhile President Wilson was at work on his reply to the Austrian note asking for an armistice and waiving preliminary negotiations, which was delivered to the State Department yesterday by Swiss Charge Oderlin. It was said in official circles that the note would be disposed of probably late this afternoon.

This was taken to mean that the reply might be made public before morning. The official text of the Austrian note has not yet been made public. That the reply will refer the note to the governments of the nations allied with the United States in the war seemed certain.

German Troops Ordered to Hold While Diplomats Strike Best Peace Bargain

By International News Service.

Paris, Oct. 30.—German troops have been ordered to hold on at all costs to enable the German diplomats to strike a peace bargain, if possible, according to news from the battlefront today.

The Germans are making the most stubborn resistance in spite of the important French advance west of Rothel, which is imperilling anew the German lines of retreat eastward.

The Austrian army has been unable to rally and reports this morning from Italy indicated that the offensive had spread.

German Generals Knew War Was Lost After First Battle of Marne

London, Oct. 30.—(British Wireless Press).—Declaring that the "obstacles to peace, whether they are on the throne or in the apartments of the supreme army command, must be abolished," Herr Cohn, independent Socialist, asserted in a speech before the Reichstag that Generals von Moltke and Von Falkenhayn were "already convinced after the first battle of the Marne in 1914 that the war was lost for Germany."

Herr Cohn, in an impassioned address, said that it was necessary to decide at once who really was responsible for the situation in which the German people now find themselves.

"The war did not arise," he added, "from the fault of individuals but from the whole historical, political and economic connection of things.

"Youthful German imperialism, essentially predatory and desirous of power, was supported to this end by strong and offensive militarism, asserting itself by means of force and lies.

"The declaration of war on France was officially based on a French airman's attack on Nuremburg, which was a lie.

"The civil government conducted negotiations with President Wilson. This did not suit the military authorities, who thwarted negotiations by declaring an intensive submarine warfare.

"How many thousands are today aware of the fact that Von Moltke, former chief of the General Staff, and General von Falkenhayn were already convinced in 1914, after the first battle of the Marne, that the war was lost for Germany?

"It was however, impossible for militarism to admit that it had committed a blunder. A preventive war must be won if it was to be justified."

have been captured and upwards of 150 guns were taken, some of which have been turned against the enemy, the War Office announced today.

The successful attack by the Italian Eighth and Twelfth armies is threatening the Austro-Hungarian flank. The Austrians blew up the bridges over the Monticano river in their retreat. The Italians are now beyond Balleno.

The text of the report follows:

"The attack of the 8th and 12th armies is threatening the enemy's flank.

"Then 10th Army has forced the enemy to abandon the heights on the left bank of the Piave.

"The enemy blew up the bridges over the Monticano.

"Our troops have taken Conegliano and passed beyond Balleno.

"We have captured another 1,000 prisoners and more than 150 guns, some of which were turned against the enemy."

(The Italians have advanced more than five miles east of the Piave.)

Immediate Release of All Prisoners, One of Armistice Terms, Says Sir George Cave

London, Oct. 30. (British Wireless Press).—The immediate and unconditional release of all prisoners of war in enemy countries will be one of the allied armistice terms, according to Sir George Cave, British home secretary.

In an address before the House of Commons he declared that he had the best reason for believing that the British government would insure this condition.

Sir George declared that the barbarous treatment of British prisoners of war is still going on in some of the German camps. Since November, 1916, he declared, 2,000 prisoners of all allied nations had died in enemy camps. In case Germany does not reply favorably to the allied demands, Sir George asserted, "we would be entitled to take reprisals (on German prisoners) within certain duly prescribed limits."

Vienna Admits Reverse on the Piave Frontier and in the Alano Sector

By International News Service.

Amsterdam, Oct. 30.—"We have been pressed back on the Piave River and in the sector of the Alano basin," says an Austrian War Office report dealing with operations on the southwestern front and received from Vienna today. "There were no large engagements yesterday in the sectors of Monte Asolone, Monte Pertica and Monte Solarole."

YANKEES DOWN EIGHTEEN PLANES

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 30.—American aviators on the front of the first army yesterday brought down eighteen enemy aviators, only five of the American machines failing to return, General Pershing reported to the War Department today, in a communique for Oct. 29.

On the Verdun front there has been increased artillery and machine gunfire, adds the comunique, which follows:

"Section A. Artillery and machine gun fire continued heavy during the night on the front of the first army north of Verdun, reaching particular intensity in the region of the Bois de Belleu and the Bois d'Ormont. From the remainder of the front there is nothing of importance to report.

"Section B—On the Verdun front there has been heavy artillery and machine gunfire today west of the Meuse, especially in the region north of St. Juvin. With more favorable weather conditions there has been increased aerial activity on the front of the First army throughout the day. Our pursuit squadrons engaged the enemy in numerous combats, in the course of which eighteen enemy airplanes were shot down. Five of our machines failed to return. Our aviators also carried out important reconnaissance and photographic missions."

Austrians Withdrawing From Albania, Already Have Evacuated Alessio

By International News Service.

Amsterdam, Oct. 30.—The Austrians are withdrawing from Albania, and have already evacuated Alessio, a town in northern Albania near the Montenegrin frontier, the War Office at Vienna announced in an official statement received here today. The withdrawal was begun, "although the entente did not succeed in breaking through," the statement said.

MOTHERS SEND SMILES OVER THE SEAS

and sent that smile to his daddy across the sea.

"It was only a month ago that his mamma died," explained the grandmother, who brought the child to the Common, where he might be filmed by the AMERICAN'S camera. "We didn't like to tell my boy about it—and maybe just he doesn't know it yet. But we—his boy and I—are going to send our smiles to him, to let him know we are both here, waiting for him to come back."

The grandmother and the little boy were only two of the well dressed, well brushed and well groomed crowd that faced the AMERICAN'S camera man today. Those boys across the sea will read no story of privation, of doing without, of poverty or hardship when they see those pictures. There was no poverty in that well dressed, happy crowd!

GAVE HIS THREE BOYS.

"My boys?" questioned a middle-aged man, leaning heavily upon his crutch; "I have three of them. God bless 'em all. I've no one else in the world but those boys, and I want them to know I'm all right, and that I'm well and happy, waiting for them to come back. Hard? Of course it's hard, ma'am. Everything is hard when you get to be old, and you see your friends, one by one, leaving you. But it's just doing 'my bit' to give my boys, and to wait for them to come back."

Then there was Betty. Now Betty hasn't been in this world very long, and it takes an expert to know just exactly what that little grimace is, when she wrinkles up her nose, and crinkles up her eyes, and shows a toothless mouth to an admiring public.

But Betty's mother said it was a smile, and that Jack on the other side would know that was a smile, the minute he saw it. For Betty's mama, pale and worn looking from her journey to that babyland where Betty came from, was a war bride. "When Jack went away," she told me, "he saw only tear filled eyes, and I had to cry even though I meant to be so brave. But today I'm going to wipe out that picture. Betty is going to smile, and so am I. And that's a smile of Betty's whether you think so or not."

AND THEN THE MOTHERS.

Then there were the mothers; anxious, patient mothers, who count there all among the boys across the sea, and whose most anxious moment when they sea nthe casualty list in the morning.

"Am I in the right place to have my picture taken?" an anxious voice asked me. I saw a mother with a service pin on which three stars gleamed confronting me. "I came from Malden, and maybe I don't belong here at all. But one of my boys went from Clarendon Park, and another went with the 101st Engineers, and the third is my brother. I don't know where he is, but I want him to see me in the pictures. "And that loyal, patient mother went into the front of the crowd, to await a turn that she hoped would be one of the first.

Two smiling girls, eighteen or nineteen years old, in bright tams and middy suits, pressed eagerly forward, to be sure that they "got in the picture." "I have a brother—and a 'well—a best friend,'" said one, "and I want them both to see me." And the radiant smile she turned to me would drive a dentist to despair, so brilliant was it with pearly, shining teeth.

Watch It Grow!

Mayor Andrew J. Peters today heads the list of those prominent men of the city and State who have sent into the Boston AMERICAN congratulatory messages at the opening of the fifth annual campaign for the Christmas Basket Fund, designed to bring Christmas cheer into the homes of poor widows and children.

This fund, which started as an experiment, at once took hold on the imaginations and the generosity of Boston men and women until, while only five years old, it has already become an institution in the life of the city.

Charitable people in writing speak of it now as something as inevitable and as joy bringing as Christmas itself. For instance, Attorney Thomas F. Reddy sends his check and says, "I enclose herewith my usual contribution to the Christmas Basket Fund. I am glad you are beginning early."

Mr. Harry Small of Farley Harvey & Company says, "Enclosed please find check. It is a pleasure and a privilege to contribute toward such a good cause, and I sincerely hope the contributions will exceed those of last year." There are others to the same effect.

The hope of Mr. Small will have to be realized this year, for with the first announcement of the opening of the fund the secretary has been flooded with the most pitiful appeals from poor families.

In spite of the apparent surface prosperity this year it appears that the very poor, the widows, the wives of soldiers and the aged and infirm are worse off than ever.

Any housewife knows the enormous rise this year in the cost of everything eatable, and every housewife also knows, if she has thought at all about the items of her Christmas dinner, that a Christmas dinner for a family is going to mean a greater expenditure than ever in household history.

For a poor family with one grown-up working it will be a problem, but for a widow with several children whose income depends upon her earnings with perhaps the added pay of one of the eldest children Christmas dinner, except the barest necessities, will be out of the question.

PLEA BY SOLDIER'S WIFE.

It is familes of this sort that the Christmas Basket Fund is intended to help, and only one who has been through it realizes how very many of these families there are in the city. Here is part of a letter from a Dorchester woman which in some ways is typical of the sort of appeal which is already beginning to come in:

> Will you please send me a Christmas basket this year? My husband is in the U. S. Army and what I get from the government is so small that it is very hard for me to get along with. I hope you will not forget me this year for the sake of my three little children, all of whom have been sick with the influenza. God only knows how I have struggled to get along since my husband joined the army. He is at the firing line at present and each day I am afraid to hear he is dead.
> Very gratefully,
> MRS. ——— ———,
> — Dorchester avenue.

There's one case. This woman will not have anything for dinner on Christmas Day except the barest necessities of life if someone doesn't step in and help. It will be a hard enough Christmas for her anyway, worrying about her husband. Here is a chance for somebody to take off her shoulders that lesser worry about her Christmas dinner.

Following are some of the things said about this fund by well-known men of Greater Boston:

MAYOR EDWARD W. QUINN of Cambridge—The Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston AMERICAN is a splendid thing and should appeal to everybody. I have seen the great good that has been done and the many families in distress that it has helped. While it is true that there is great suffering and misery across the ocean, yet we should not forget those at home who are suffering and in distress. Let's help to make their Christmas a happy and merry one.

JUDGE CHARLES S. SULLIVAN, Charlestown Police Court—While it is true that at the present time many household heads among the laboring class are employed on war work and are receiving larger pay than has been their fortune in the past, many others of the same element are not receiving more pay than they did 15 years ago. Their modest living expenses are more than double what they were a few years ago, and, as a result, a real substantial meal of meat is a luxury seldom enjoyed in these times. Why, I have heard of instances where two pounds of meat converted into a stew is made to do a family of four for a week—that is, so far as meat is concerned. I have no doubt but what the AMERICAN will find many homes where a Christmas basket will prove a very welcome gift.

Mayor Peters Asks Aid for Christmas Fund

To the Editor, Boston AMERICAN, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir:

There have been few movements, I sincerely believe, that have resulted in more helpful charity to the needy, or carried with them more direct relief than the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston AMERICAN.

Particularly in these days when the burden of wars bears most heavily on our needy, there are many who are unable to secure the food that they should have. Uncomplainingly they bear their burdens, and, it seems to me, that it is our privilege to bring to them what measure of Christmas cheer we can.

I, therefore, urge the citizens of Boston to contribute as generously as possible to the Basket Fund.

Very truly yours,

Andrew J. Peters

Mayor

130,000 BOYS AND GIRLS TO AID WAR FUND DRIVE

Every boy and girl in New England from twelve years old to twenty will be given a practical opportunity to back our American fighters by enrolling in the Victory Boy and Girl Division of the United War Work Campaign. J. Blaine Withee of Lawrence and Miss Lois M. Kugler of Sagamore, who have charge of the work, announced today that from present indications 65,000 boys and 65,000 girls will be enrolled. Every one of the 130,000 boys and girls will pledge themselves to earn at least $5 for the cause.

DANIELS LAUDS NEW ENGLAND AID IN WAR

Secretary of Navy in Faneuil Hall Address Tells Nation's Appreciation

navy has no place in politics, and I am going to devote part of my time to politics."

SEES NEW DESTROYERS.

Then turning to the newspapermen he exclaimed: "And in between times I will devote a few minutes to you boys. I always do what you tell me, for I used to be an editor myself—but the boys don't always do what I tell them.

"I am going to visit the Navy Yard and the plant at Squantum. I want to see how those new destroyers are getting on. Then I'm going to speak in Faneuil Hall and tell the people of Boston about our navy. Later, I'm going to Lynn, and tonight I'm coming back here to speak. This morning belongs to the navy. But before I turn myself over to the navy I want to tell you boys something.

"Republican politicians in the last few days before election, after creating the impression for nine months that they agreed, praised, commended and were whole-heartedly with the President on the fourteen points laid down by him in his message to Germany, have tried to create the impression that they disagreed with these fourteen points.

"They have tried to drive a wedge between the allies to destroy the leadership of America by posing as super-patriots. They have tried to tell the American people the thing to do is to elect a Republican Congress; they have tried to monopolize patriotism. They have tried to substitute a debating society for firm Americanism.

"It is the Republican politicians who are to blame, not the Republican voters. And it is for the voters to say if the fourteen points proposed by President Wilson ought to be rejected. We ought to give Mr. Wilson the same kind of a Congress Lincoln had; the same kind of Congress McKinley had, a Congress of his own party. We've got a spokesman, and he should have confidence in these behind his words.

"The Republicans want America to secede from France, Italy and the other allies; to secede from her firm, unwavering, statesmanlike policies and substitute a wavering debate."

Secretary Daniels then bowed, turned to Admiral Wood, and announced that he was ready for the navy yard visit.

TRIBUTE TO NEW ENGLAND.

Richard H. Long, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, Dr. John W. Coughlan, of the Democratic State Committee, and Mayor Andrew J. Peters were his first callers. He had a short private conference with Mayor Peters. Admiral Wood, accompanied by his aid, arrived just before 10 o'clock.

Secretary Daniels in his speech at Faneuil Hall today said:

"New England has furnished large quotas of officers and men, whose valor and capacity have aided greatly in bringing the glory to the navy, which in this war justly belongs to it.

"I wish to express my personal appreciation of the deep interest and great help given by the people of New England in every effort of the navy to measure up to the needs of the country in time of war.

"It has not been necessary to cross a T or dot an I in the naval organization to meet every need of the expanding navy. All that has been necessary is to increase personnel and material along lines worked out and well-considered long before the war began, adopting, of course, such new measures through established agencies as the lessons of war have taught us.

"In no single department of the navy, ashore or afloat, has there been the least change of organization, and this is attributed to the fact that in time of peace the Navy Department was placed upon so efficient a footing and had secured such perfect team work that the enlargement was along lines that had been wrought out, planned and adopted before the war came upon us."

$8,400,000 EXPENDED HERE.

Commenting upon the great things that have been done in New England by the navy and how the naval establishment has grown since the war, Secretary Daniels pointed out that in 1912 there were employed in the Boston Navy Yard 1,892 men, and this number had increased in July, 1918, to 9,374 men, which means, of course, that naval expansion in Boston on the material side has been upon a scale of great magnitude and the product which the skilled workers in the Boston Navy Yard have given the navy has been a great factor in all its achievements.

"During the eighteen months previous to the administration of Woodrow Wilson the amount expended by the navy in Massachusetts was $6,400,000. I have had a careful estimate made by the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of all the money expended or contracted for in Massachusetts since the war began, and in dollars the estimate is $239,500,000.

"This includes the pay of civilian labor, pay of officers and enlisted men in the navy, pay to the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation for the construction of vessels, the construction of the shipbuilding plant at Squantum, and other expenditures for materials and contracts made with Massachusetts firms. It does not include the recent purchase by the Navy Department of the drydock undertaken by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the erection of shops adjacent thereto, involving an immediate expenditure of more than $5,000,000.

"These figures speak eloquently of the close and intimate touch of the Navy Department and the people of Massachusetts. It shows the faith which I have had in the people of Massachusetts and the manufacturers of your State to do things quickly for an efficient navy and also the fine spirit of co-operation and splendid effort upon the part of the people of this State.

"We have made Harvard a great naval institution and when I was here last Spring, I truly told President Lowell that while Harvard, in its long history, had sent to the world great leaders in every line of activity, it had never sent out to the world men who would serve it so truly in keeping the lamp of liberty burning as the young men it was training for the naval service.

"The Massachusetts Institute of Technology has long been a naval institution, but in this war it has responded nobly in aiding and training young men who have given a new glory to the adventurous spirit and valor of American manhood.

LIVE UP TO TRADITIONS.

"At many other points in Massachusetts and on the ancient island of Nantucket we have men trained for naval service and, therefore, when I come to your State I know that I am coming to a people who cherish the traditions of the navy and who are among the foremost in the giving of everything they have, skill and manhood, toward the great service which it has rendered and is rendering in this mighty war."

TRIBUTE PAID DANIELS BY FITZGERALD

Former Mayor Fitzgerald, presiding at the noon day rally at Faneuil Hall and introducing Secretary Daniels, said in part:

"During recent years in Washington Massachusetts has been honored by having one of her sons chosen to be the Secretary of the Navy. John D. Long served with conspicuous ability in the Spanish-American War, and he was followed in later years by Secretary Moody and Secretary von Meyer.

"I do not think that I do any of these men an injustice when I say that they never appreciated naval deeds in Massachusetts as Mr. Daniels has done since he took office.

"Some months ago, when the whole world became nervous over the increasing danger from the submarines, Secretary Daniels selected the labor and industry of the people of Massachusetts above all others to take the lead in building these submarines effectively and quickly, so that and more than $75,000,000 has [illegible] authorized to be spent at Fore [illegible] Squantum for submarines and other war vessels, resulting in the employment of thousands of men night and day, with the highest wages in the history of the world.

DANIELS TO THE FRONT.

"Not only this, but a few days ago when our Republican friends on Beacon Hill admitted their inability to handle the dry dock in South Boston, which was authorized years ago, Mr. Daniels came to the front again and personally went before the committee in Congress and insisted that this dry dock be taken over from the State and completed, at a cost of $4,000,000.

"These, however, are characteristic of the man. Though he comes from North Carolina he loves New England, as he loves every part of the country."

Edward A. Filene said in part:

"There has never been a time in American history when the vote of every individual counted for so much as it will next Tuesday. Your one vote may decide whether Walsh shall succeed Weeks in the United States Senate—whether a man who will help or a man who will hinder the President's policies shall be elected.

WILSON LEADER IN THOUGHT.

"And one vote of the Senator you elect may decide the kind of peace we shall get out of all the sacrifice and tragedy of this war, because the issue on the terms of settlement promises to be very close between the just and far-sighted terms of President Wilson that will give us a just and lasting peace and the narrower and reactionary program of men whose faces are towards the past. Your one vote for Senator may actually determine the kind of peace treaty the United States shall sign.

"It seems almost miraculous that at the three great crisis of our history we have produced a supreme leader—Washington, Lincoln, and now Wilson. Our President is not only the trusted leader of the masses here but of the liberal masses and of liberal thought the world over.

"His handling of the diplomatic policies of this war has been amazing in their far-reaching effect. It [illegible] by wise diplomacy so supplanted allied arms as to lead to the unconditional surrender of Bulgaria. And now Austria is offering, it seems, an unconditional surrender, not alone because she faces certain military defeat, but also because she knows that so long as President Wilson leads the politics of the allied world that the terms that will be imposed upon her will be just and such as will give her a chance to live again, however difficult a medicine justice itself may prove.

"If we are to get out of this war the things we have fought for we must keep President Wilson's leadership here and abroad firm and effective. There is no question that the one thing that will make it surest that we, through our President, will get the kind of peace we are fighting for and the kind of reconstruction we want in this country is to put behind the President a sympathetic Democratic State and House who will do teamwork with the President.

"If we lose we will hamper his effectiveness here and cast the shadow of doubt, in the mind of Europe, whether the President really represents our will as a united people.

"All this means just one thing to us in Massachusetts and that is the casting of our vote next Tuesday for David I. Walsh for United States Senator, regardless of our party affiliations."

Naval Coat, But No Winter Furs for Yeowomen

"Yeowomen, you can't wear those furs this Winter, no matter how expensive."

This order was issued today after some yeowomen of the Boston Navy Yard had appealed to Rear Admiral Spencer S. Wood, commanding the First Naval District, for the privilege of wearing furs.

The answer was that the women were well fortified for Winter by the new naval coat, which is as comfortable and quite as attractive as furs.

DRINK HOT WATER EVERY MORNING FOR INFLUENZA

Don't eat a bite of breakfast until you drink a glass of hot water, says authority.

Says a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it washes poisons from system, and makes one feel clean, sweet and fresh.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice the drinking of phosphated hot water before breakfast, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons in the bowels which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, sick headaches, rheumatism, lumbago, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning-inside bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

MORGENTHAU TELLS PLANS TO RAID EGYPT

"Holy War" Proves Failure from First—Mohammedans Fail to Respond.

Published by special arrangement with the McClure Newspaper Syndicate. Copyright, 1918, by Doubleday, Page & Co. All rights reserved. Copyright in Great Britain, Canada and Australia. All rights reserved for France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Spain, Russia and the Scandinavian countries.

Failure of Holy War.

From the first, however, the "Holy War" proved a failure. The Mohammedans of such countries as India, Egypt, Algiers and Morocco knew that they were getting far better treatment than they could obtain under any other conceivable conditions. Moreover, the simple-minded Mohammedans could not understand why they should prosecute a holy war against Christians and at the same time have Christian nations, such as Germany and Austria, as their partners. This association made the whole proposition ridiculous.

Was there then no "Holy War" at all? Did Wangenheim's "Big Thing" really fail? Whenever I think of this burlesque "Jihad" a particular scene in the American Embassy comes to my mind. On one side of the table sits Enver, most peacefully sipping tea and eating cakes, and on the other side is myself, engaged in the same unwarlike occupation. It is November 14th, the day after the Sultan has declared his holy war; there have been meetings at the mosques and other places, at which the declaration has been read and fiery speeches made. Enver now assures me that absolutely no harm will come to Americans; in fact, that there will be no massacres anyway. While he is talking, one of my secretaries comes in and tells me that a little mob is making demonstrations against certain foreign establishments. It has assailed an Austrian shop which has unwisely kept up its sign saying that it has "English clothes" for sale. I ask Enver what this means; he answers that it is all a mistake; there is no intention of attacking anybody. A little while after he leaves, I am informed that the mob has attacked the Bon Marché, a French dry goods store, and is heading directly for the British Embassy. I at once call Enver on the telephone; it is all right, he says, nothing will happen to the Embassy. A minute or two after, the mob immediately wheels about and starts for Tokatlian's, the most important restaurant in Constantinople.

The fact that this is conducted by an Armenian makes it fair game. Six men who have poles, with hooks at the end, break all the mirrors and windows, others take the marble tops of the tables and smash them to bits. In a few minutes the place has been completely gutted.

This demonstration comprised the "Holy War," so far as Constantinople understood it. Such was the inglorious end of Germany's attempt to arouse 300,000,000 Mohammedans against the Christian world! Only one definite result did the Kaiser accomplish by spreading this inciting literature. It aroused in the Mohammedan soul all that intense animosity towards the Christian which is the fundamental fact in his strange emotional nature, and thus started passions aflame that afterward spent themselves in the massacre of the Armenians and other subjects.

CHAPTER XIV.

DJEMAL, A TROUBLESOME MARK ANTONY

In early November, 1914, the railroad station at Maidar Pasha was the scene of a great demonstration. Djemal, the minister of marine, one of the three men who were then most powerful in the Turkish empire, was leaving to take command of the fourth Turkish army, which had its headquarters in Syria. All the members of the Cabinet and other influential people in Constantinople assembled to give this departing satrap an enthusiastic farewell. They hailed him as the "Saviour of Egypt," and Djemal himself, just before his train started, made this public declaration:

"I shall not return to Constantinople until I have conquered Egypt!"

The whole performance seemed to me to be somewhat bombastic.

Djemal was not a popular man in Constantinople. The other members of the triumvirate, in addition to their less desirable qualities, had certain attractive traits—Talaat his rough virility and spontaneous good nature, Enver his courage and personal gracefulness—but there was little about Djemal that was pleasing.

ALL PART OF DAY'S WORK.

Yet, after a momentary meeting, I was not surprised to hear that Djemal was a man with whom assassination and judicial murder were all part of the day's work. Like all the Young Turks his origin had been extremely humble. He had joined the Committee of Union and Progress in the early days, and his personal power, as well as his relentlessness, had rapidly made him one of the leaders. After the murder of Nazim, Djemal had become Military Governor of Constantinople, his chief duty in this post being to remove from the scene the opponents of the ruling powers. This congenial task he performed with great skill, and the reign of terror that resulted was largely Djemal's handiwork. Subsequently Djemal became a member of the Cabinet, but he could not work harmoniously with his associates; he was always a troublesome partner.

Djemal's expedition represented Turkey's most spectacular attempt to assert its military power against the allies. As Djemal moved out of the station, the whole Turkish populace felt that an historic moment had arrived. Turkey in less than a century had lost the greater part of her dominions, and nothing had more pained the national pride than the English occupation of Egypt.

The Turks knew that under English administration, Egypt had become a prosperous country and that it would, therefore, yield great treasure to the conqueror. It is no wonder that the huzzas of the Turkish people followed the departing Djemal.

About the same time Enver left to take command of Turkey's other great military enterprise—the attack on Russia through the Caucasus. Here also were Turkish provinces to be "redeemed." But Enver had no ovation on his leaving. He went away quietly and unobserved. With the departure of these two men the war was now fairly on.

Despite these martial enterprises, other than warlike preparations were now under way in Constantinople. At that time—in the latter part of suggested nothing but war, yet now it suddenly became the great headquarters of peace.

The English fleet was constantly threatening the Dardanelles, and every day Turkish troops were passing through the streets. Yet these activities did not chiefly engage the attention of the German Embassy. Wangenheim was thinking of one thing and of one thing only; this fire-eating German had suddenly become a man of peace.

For he now learned that the greatest service which a German ambassador could render his emperor would be to end the war on terms that would save Germany from exhaustion and even from ruin; to obtain a settlement that would reinstate his fatherland in the society of nations.

"PREPARED" FOR PEACE.

In November Wangenheim began discussing this subject. It was part of Germany's system, he told me, not only to be completely prepared for war but also for peace. "A wise general, when he begins his campaign, always has at hand his plans for a retreat, in case he is defeated," said the German Ambassador.

"This principle applies just the same to a nation beginning war. There is only one certainty about war—and that is that it must end some time. So, when we plan war, we must consider also a campaign for peace."

But Wangenheim was interested then in something more tangible than this philosophic principle. Germany had immediate reasons for desiring the end of hostilities, and Wangenheim discussed them frankly and cynically. He said that Germany had prepared for only a short war, because she had expected to crush France and Russia in two brief campaigns, lasting not longer than six months.

Clearly this plan had failed and there was little likelihood that Germany would win the war; Wangenheim told me this in so many words. Germany, he added, would make a great mistake if she persisted in fighting the war to exhaustion, for such a fight would mean the permanent loss of her colonies, her mercantile marine, and her whole economic and commercial status.

"If we don't get Paris in thirty days, we are beaten," Wangenheim had told me in August, and though his attitude changed somewhat after the battle of the Marne, he made no attempt to conceal the fact that the great rush campaign had collapsed, that all the Germans could now look forward to was a tedious, exhausting war, and that all which they could obtain from the existing situation would be a drawn battle.

"We have made a mistake this time," Wangenheim said, "in not laying in supplies for a protracted struggle; it was an error, however, that we shall not repeat; next time we shall store up enough copper and cotton to last for five years."

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap to make, but it really has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Advertisement.

ARMY AND NAVY AMERICAN

LIBERTY BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1918. DEMOCRACY

HALLOWE'EN PARTY AT ST. JAMES' TONIGHT

There's a big time due for the young folks tomorrow night.

Up at St. James' Hall on Huntington avenue, they're going to have a Hallowe'en party, with two jazz bands to liven things up and keep them livened up every minute of the evening.

The Darktown Jazz Band has come to the rescue of the famous St. James aggregation of artists, for there are to be no intermissions. From 8 o'clock until 2 a. m., Director R. J. Galvin says there will be no letup. Novelty favors and souvenirs have been provided for the many guests expected by the management.

HAIR COMING OUT?

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of Danderine at any drug store for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff.—Advertisement.

CHILDREN HATE PILLS, CALOMEL AND CASTOR OIL

Give Fruit Laxative when cross, bilious, feverish or constipated.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Advertisement.

MILITARY MASS TO BE HELD AT AYER

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, Oct. 30.—Cardinal O'Connell is likely to attend the military mass to be held here next Sunday at 10:30 a. m. An invitation will be sent to him. A special musical program has been arranged by Joseph P. Ginty, secretary and musical director of the Knights of Columbus. Visitors will be permitted to attend the services.

About 12,600 Massachusetts soldiers qualified to vote in the State election cast their ballots in "Y" Hut No. 22, near the camp postoffice. Captain George F. Tait of Cambridge had charge of the voting.

The ballots were brought to camp by Secretary of State Albert P. Langtry, Councillor Louis R. Sullivan and Charles A. Baxter. The result will not be announced until after the vote of the State is counted.

A big time is on the entertainment card at "Y" Hut No. 24, the occasion being officers' night.

Miss Mary Durkin of Boston called at the main building of the Knights of Columbus and left $5 for the entertainment of the boys.

The medical department of the 36th Infantry is giving an all-star vaudeville show in the main building of the Knights of Columbus. The proceeds will go toward the company fund.

A committee representing the parents of soldiers of Jewish extraction from Brockton left boxes of fruit, cake, cigars and chewing gum at the Jewish welfare house for distribution.

RADIO'S DAILY SCHEDULE CHANGED

U. S. Naval Radio School, Cambridge, Oct. 30.—Radio underwent a change of schedule today, as a result of the setting back of clocks one hour. Heretofore drills have been held at 4 p. m. after classes were dismissed. Hereafter the drill time will be from 10 a. m. to 11:45 a. m. Lunch time will be from 11:45 a. m. to 1 p. m., at which latter hour classes will be resumed and continue until 5:35 p. m.

Night school class hours remain unchanged—from 7:30 to 9 p. m.

Radio football boosters are looking forward today with confidence that the Hingham Arsenal eleven, with which the Radio eleven will clash at the Stadium Saturday, will go down to defeat in the same manner as Radio's other opponents have done. Nothing less than a shut-out will satisfy the Radio enthusiasts, who are now hopeful of a whole season without a single tally chalked up against the wireless outfit.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

A Cincinnati Barber Tells How to Make a Remedy for Gray Hair.

Mr. Frank Harbaugh of Cincinnati, O., who has been a barber for more than forty years, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger. This is not a dye, it does not color the most delicate scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

If you have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, appetite poor, lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested foods, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, so you can eat what you like. At 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

COUGHED THREE MONTHS

Relief In 24 Hours. Simple Home Medicine Did It.

Mr. H. C. Hoot, chief operator, F. C. R. R., Birmingham, Ala., writes:

"I tried your Mentho-Laxene for a cough and I find it the premier medicine for that ailment. I had a cough for three months and made me a syrup of your Mentho-Laxene and I got permanent relief in twenty-four hours, etc."

Mentho-Laxene is a richly concentrated mixture of wild cherry, Tolu, Grindelia, Menthol, Ammonium chloride, Cascara, etc., sold by good druggists in 2½-ounce bottles. Mixed at home with simple syrup, it makes a full pint. A wonderful medicine, wonderfully cheap, and guaranteed most effective for colds, coughs, catarrh, hoarseness, difficult breathing, etc.—Advertisement.

Resinol

will heal that disfiguring rash so you can wear this dress

"I know, because I have used it, and found that it stopped the smarting and itching when I made the first application, and in a short time the eruption was gone. I used Resinol Soap with it and it quickened the action of Resinol Ointment. You can get both from your druggist."

WALSH ACCUSES WEEKS OF PROTECTING COAL BARONS

Attempts to protect the big coal interests in maintaining the excessive prices for coal through his vote against the Pomerene amendment to fix the price of coal, was charged against Senator John W. Weeks by ex-Governor David I. Walsh in addresses made at Taunton, Fall River and New Bedford in behalf of his campaign for United States Senator on the Democratic ticket.

Ex-Governor Walsh called upon Senator Weeks to justify his responsibility for the ship shortage during the coal famine last Winter, through filibustering which delayed for two years the Shipping Board bill.

VOTED AGAINST AMENDMENT.

Ex-Governor Walsh said, in part:

"I shall present to you the proof that Senator Weeks voted against giving to the national government the power to fix the price of coal and to punish any producer or dealer who charged higher prices in violation of its orders.

"When the bill to conserve the supply and to control the distribution of food products and fuel was pending in the United States Senate, July 21, 1917, Senator Pomerene of Ohio presented an amendment to protect the users of coal against the plundering of the Coal Trust.

"Evidence was presented to the Senate in reports from public committees of defence in several States that, with war upon us, the Coal Trust was taking advantage of the necessities of the people and charging at the mines prices which increased their profits 1,500 per cent per ton, while the wages to the miners had increased but 15 per cent. The Coal Trust had the people by the throat, industries were crippled and the prices were increasing daily when the Pomerene amendment reached a vote in the Senate upon July 21, 1917. Seventy-two Senators, three-fourths of the whole membership of that body, voted for the amendment to protect the people, and Senator Weeks and eleven other Senators voted against the amendment. Lined up with Weeks among the little band of defenders of the Coal Trust were Brandegee, Colt, Knox, Lodge, Penrose and McLean, the arch reactionaries of the Senate, who are always found supporting selfish big business against the people.

CALLS FOR ANSWER.

"Why, Mr. Weeks, did you attempt to protect the coal companies in their piratical methods of taking advantage of war conditions to rob our people? Every user of coal in the State has the right to demand an explanation. Answer, Mr. Weeks.

"And when you answer, justify if you can your responsibility for the lack of ships to carry coal to New England during the coal shortage of last Winter.

"The people of this country must have bread! The people of this country must have fuel! You, Mr. Weeks, by your action upon legislation to increase the price of wheat and to fix the price of fuel, would have raised the price of both to all and denied any adequate supply of either to the millions of the consumers of the country."

Bay State Street Railway Conditions Abominable, Says Long

Survey of the street railway situation in Massachusetts, particularly the Bay State Railway, with the probable result that certain lines will be taken over and operated by the State, was promised by Richard H. Long, Democratic candidate for Governor, in addresses to voters at Fall River, New Bedford and Taunton.

Mr. Long said Massachusetts street railway conditions were "abominable." The proposed ten-cent fare, he said, meant $200 a year deducted from the wages of each workingman. Other disadvantages were pointed out by the speaker.

As a remedy for the present conditions, the speaker promised to survey the "entire situation" and be guided by the result. He predicted investigation would show all street railways should be taken over and operated by the State, under a single head.

DEPLORES FARE RAISE.

Mr. Long said, in part:

"The street railways of Massachusetts are in a discreditable condition. Street railway fares have been boosted to hitherto unknown heights.

While the fares have constantly gone up, the service has gone down to a point that is at times dangerous to the health and safety of passengers.

"We have a glaring example of these conditions in the Bay State Street Railway. Within two years the private managers of the system went before the Public Service Commission and pleaded for relief. The Public Service Commission squeezed $4,000,000 of watered stock out of the system and then granted every request for relief they had made.

SAYS LINES DISCONTINUED.

"Their service may be described as 'abominable.' Many lines have been discontinued. Much track has been torn up. The equipment is in a dilapidated condition. The road has gone into a receiver's hands and now asks for a 10-cent fare.

"Ten-cent fare means $200 a year out of the wages of every workingman. It means a cold lunch in a corner of a shop for the workman who previously rode to and from his home during the lunch hour. It means the depriving of the children of the opportunity for the ride to the beach or recreation centre.

"Such a condition is actually a menace to the development of the State and the prosperity of its people.

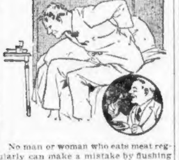
QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder troubles you.



No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications. — Advertisement.

FIGHT FOR GOULD ESTATE BEGINS IN FRANCE

Preliminary Steps Taken in Divorce Suits Brought by Millionaire and Wife

By NABOTH HEDIN.

Copyright, 1918, by Universal Service.

Paris, Oct. 30.—Prolonged litigation is anticipated over the estate of Frank Gould, valued at several millions, in the divorce suits brought by Gould and his wife.

The French laws forbid the divulgence of details of evidence in divorce actions, but persistent report has it that statutory grounds are alleged by both. It is expected a protracted battle will be fought over the property before the main divorce action comes to be tried.

Preliminary pleadings were heard privately by a referee at Versailles last Friday. A decision is looked for next week regarding the disposition of the Gould property which Mrs. Gould has attached, claiming one-half. This decision is expected to open the legal battle.

The couple were married in Edinburgh on October 23, 1910. Early last May they separated after a violent quarrel, after which Mrs. Gould went to live separately in Paris. Last August the double divorce action was begun before a civil tribunal at Versailles. Since then the couple has been living at a country house called Maisons Laffitte.

Money Saving Piano Sale

I CUT THE EXPENSES TO REDUCE YOUR COST

If I save money for my customers my business lives. If I do not save money for them my business dies. My business life is based on low money saving prices, other dealers have the same pianos to offer you that I have; to get your trade I must offer you something attractive in the way of price, a low price, a price so much lower for the same grades of pianos offered elsewhere, that your intelligence will demand that you buy from me. I give a guarantee with every piano—a guarantee with no loopholes in it to protect me, but made iron clad to protect you. I am making the two words Collins and Confidence mean the same thing by my methods of doing business.

Stirring Developments Each Day in New Oppenheim Serial

Origin of the Cabinet

GEORGE I. is aid to have been responsible for the word "Cabinet" as applied to politics. He could not take part in the deliberations of his own Privy Council because he knew no English, so the ministers used to meet in his private room or cabinet.

This Day in History

THIS is the anniversary of the battle of Caldiero, in 1805, between Massena, one of Napoleon's most brilliant marshals, and Archduke Charles of Austria. The French forces were repulsed after a sanguinary struggle that lasted two days.

THE ZEPPELIN'S PASSENGER

An Exciting and Romantic New Spy Serial by E. Phillips Oppenheim

CHAPTER III.

IT seemed to the two women, brief though the period of actual silence was, that in those few seconds they jointly conceived definite and lasting impressions of the man who was to become, during the next few weeks, an object of the deepest concern to both of them. The intruder was slightly built, of little more than medium height, of dark complexion, with an almost imperceptible moustache of military pattern, black hair dishevelled with the wind, and eyes of almost peculiar brightness. He carried himself with an assurance which was somewhat remarkable considering the condition of his torn and mud-stained clothes, the very quality of which was almost undistinguishable. They both, curiously enough, formed the same instinctive conviction that, notwithstanding his tramplike appearance and his burglarious entrance, this was not a person to be greatly feared.

The stranger brushed aside Philippa's incoherent exclamation and opened the conversation with some ceremony.

"Ladies," he began, with a low bow, "in the first place let me offer my most profound apologies for this unusual form of entrance to your house."

Philippa rose from her easy chair and confronted him. The firelight played upon her red-gold hair, and surprise had driven the weariness from her face. Against the black oak of the chimneypiece she had almost the appearance of a framed cameo. Her voice was quite steady, although its inflection betrayed some indignation.

"Will you kindly explain who you are and what you mean by this extraordinary behaviour?" she demanded.

"It is my earnest intention to do so without delay," he assured her, his eyes apparently rivetted upon Philippa. "Kindly pardon me."

He held out his arm to stop Helen, who, with her eye upon the bell, had made a stealthy attempt to slip past him. Her eyes flashed as she felt his fingers upon her arm.

"How dare you stop me!" she exclaimed.

Interests of All

"My dear Miss Fairclough," he remonstrated, "in the interests of all of us, it is better that we should have a few moments of undisturbed conversation. I am taking it for granted that I have the pleasure of addressing Miss Fairclough?"

There was something about the man's easy confidence which was, in its way, impressive yet irritating. Helen appeared bereft of words and retreated to her place almost mildly. Philippa's very delicate eyebrows were drawn together in a slight frown.

"You are acquainted with our names, then?"

"Perfectly," was the suave reply. "You, I presume, are Lady Cranston? I may be permitted to add," he went on, looking at her steadfastly, "that the description from which I recognize you does you less than justice."

"I find that remark, under the circumstances, impertinent," Philippa told him coldly.

He shrugged his shoulders. There was a slight smile upon his lips and his eyes twinkled.

"Alas!" he murmured, "for the moment I forgot the somewhat unusual circumstances of our meeting. Permit me to offer you what I trust you will accept as the equivalent of a letter of introduction."

"A letter of introduction," Philippa repeated, glancing at his disordered clothes, "and you come in through the window!"

"Believe me," the intruder assured her, "it was the only way."

"Perhaps you will tell me, then," Philippa demanded, her anger gradually giving way to bewilderment, "what is wrong with my front door?"

"For all I know, dear lady," the newcomer confessed, "yours may be an excellent front door. I would ask you however, to consider my appearance. I have been obliged to conclude the last few miles of my journey in somewhat ignominious fashion. My clothes—they were nice clothes, too, when I started," he added, looking down at himself ruefully—"have suffered. And, as you perceive, I have lost my hat."

"Your hat?" Helen exclaimed, with a sudden glance at Nora's trophy.

"Precisely! I might have posed before your butler, perhaps, as belonging to what you call the hatless brigade, but the mud upon my clothes, and these unfortunate rents in my garments, would have necessitated an explanation which I thought better avoided. I make myself quite clear, I trust?"

"Clear?" Philippa murmured helplessly.

"Clear?" Helen echoed, with a puzzled frown.

"I mean, of course," their visitor explained, "so far as regards my choosing this somewhat surreptitious form of entrance into your house."

Towards the Bell

Philips shrugged her shoulders and made a determined move towards the bell. The intruder, however, barred her way. She looked up into his face and found it difficult to maintain her indignation. His expression, besides being distinctly pleasant, was full of a respectful admiration.

"Will you please let me pass?" she insisted.

"Madam," he replied, "I am afraid that it is your intention to ring the bell.

"Of course it is," she admitted. "Don't dare to prevent me."

"Madam, I do not wish to prevent you," he assured her. "A few moments' delay—that is all I plead for."

"Will you explain at once, sir," Philippa demanded, "what you mean by forcing your way into my house in this extraordinary fashion, and by locking that door?"

"I am most anxious to do so," was the prompt reply. "I am correct, of course, in my first surmise that you are Lady Cranston—and you Miss Fairclough?" he added, bowing ceremoniously to both of them. "A very great pleasure! I recognized you both quite easily, you see, from your descriptions."

"From our descriptions?" Philippa repeated.

The newcomer bowed.

"The descriptions, glowing, indeed, but by no means exaggerated, of your brother Richard, Lady Cranston, and your fiance, Miss Fairclough."

"Richard?" Philippa almost shrieked.

"You have seen Dick?" Helen gasped.

The intruder dived in his pockets and produced two sealed envelopes. He handed one each simultaneously to Helen and to Philippa.

"My letters of introduction," he explained, with a little sigh of relief. "I trust that during their perusal you will invite me to have some tea. I am almost starving."

The two women hastened towards the lamp.

"One moment, I beg," their visitor interposed. "I have established, I trust, my credentials. May I remind you that I was compelled to ensure the safety of these few minutes' conversation with you by locking that door. Are you likely to be disturbed?"

"No, no! No chance at all," Philippa assured him.

"If we are, we'll explain," Helen promised.

"In that case," the intruder begged, "perhaps you will excuse me."

He moved towards the door and softly turned the key, then he drew the curtains carefully across the French windows. Afterwards he made his way towards the tea-table. A little throbbing cry had broken from Helen's lips.

"Philippa," she exclaimed, "it's from Dick! It's Dick's handwriting!"

Philippa's reply was incoherent. She was tearing open her own envelope. With a well-satisfied smile, the bearer of these communications seized a sandwich in one hand and poured himself out some tea with the other. He ate and drank with the restraint of good-breeding, but with a voracity which gave point to his plea of starvation. A few yards away, the breathless silence between the two women had given place to an almost hysterical series of disjointed exclamations.

"It's from Dick!" Helen repeated. "It's his own dear handwriting. How shaky it is! He's alive and well, Philippa, and he's found a friend."

"I know—I know," Philippa murmured tremulously. "Our parcels have been discovered, and he got them all at once. Just fancy, Helen, he's really not so ill, after all!"

They drew a little closer together.

"You read yours out first," Helen proposed, "and then I'll read mine."

Philippa nodded. Her voice here and there was a little uncertain.

My Dearest Sister:—I have heard nothing from you or Helen for so long that I was really getting desperate. I have had a very rough time here, but by the grace of Providence I stumbled up against an old friend the other day, Bertram Maderstrom, whom you must have heard me speak of in my college days. It isn't too much to say that he has saved my life. He has unearthed your parcels, found me decent quarters, and I am getting double rations. He has promised, too, to get this letter through to you.

You Need Not Worry

You needn't worry about me now, dear. I am feeling twice the man I was a month ago, and I shall stick it out now quite easily.

Write me as often as ever you can. Your letters and Helen's make all the difference.

My love to you and to Henry.

Your affectionate brother,

RICHARD.

"P. S.—Is Henry an admiral yet? I suppose he was in the Jutland scrap, which they all tell us here was a great German victory. I hope he came out all right."

Philippa read the postscript with a little shiver. Then she set her teeth as though determined to ignore it.

"Isn't it wonderful?" she exclaimed, turning toward Helen with glowing eyes. "Now yours, dear!"

Helen's voice trembled as she read. Her eyes, too, at times were misty:

"Dearest:

"I am writing to you so differently because I feel that you will really get this letter. I have had an astonishing stroke of luck, as you will gather from Philippa's note. You can't imagine the difference. A month ago I really thought I should have to chuck it in. Now I am putting on flesh every day and beginning to feel myself again. I owe my life to a pal with whom I was at college, and whom you and I, dearest, will have to remember all our lives.

I think of you always, and my thoughts are like the flowers of which we see nothing in these hideous huts. My greatest joy is in dreaming of the day when we shall meet again.

Write to me often, sweetheart. Your letters and my thoughts of you are the one joy of my life.

"Always your lover, DICK."

There were a few moments of significant silence. The girls were leaning together, their arms around one another's necks, their heads almost touching. Behind them, their visitor continued to eat and drink. He rose at last, however, reluctantly to his feet, and coughed. They started, suddenly remembering his presence. Philippa turned impulsively towards him with outstretched hands.

"I can't tell you how thankful we are to you," she declared.

"Both of us," Helen echoed.

He touched with his fingers a box of cigarettes which stood upon the tea-table.

"You permit?" he asked.

"Of course," Philippa assented eagerly. "You will find some matches on the tray there. Do please help yourself. I am afraid that I must have seemed very discourteous, but this has all been so amazing. Won't you have some fresh tea and some toast, or wouldn't you like some more sandwiches?"

"Nothing more at present, thank you," he replied. "If you do not mind, I would rather continue our conversation."

"These letters are wonderful," Philippa told him gratefully. "You know from whom they come, of course. Dick is my twin brother, and until the war we had scarcely ever been parted. Miss Fairclough here is engaged to be married to him. It is quite two months since we had a line, and I myself have been in London for the last three days, three very weary days, making inquiries everywhere."

"I am very happy," he said, "to have brought you such good news."

Once more the normal aspect of the situation began to reimpose itself upon the two women. They remembered the locked door, the secrecy of their visitor's entrance, and his disordered condition.

"May I ask to whom we are indebted for this great service?" Philippa inquired.

"My name for the present is Hamar Lessingham," was the suave reply.

"For the present?" Philippa repeated. "You have perhaps, some explanations to make," she went on, with some hesitation; "the condition of your clothes, your somewhat curious form of entrance?"

"With your permission."

"One moment," Helen intervened eagerly. "Is is possible, Mr. —— Lessingham, that you have seen Major Felstead lately?"

"A matter of fifty-six hours ago, Miss Fairclough. I am happy to tell you that he was looking, under the circumstances, quite reasonably well."

Helen caught up a photograph from the table by her side, and came over to their visitor's side.

"This was taken just before he went out the first time," she continued. "Is he anything like that now?"

Mr. Hamar Lessingham sighed and shook his head.

"You must expect," he warned her, "that prison and hospital have had their effect upon him. He was gaining strength every day, however, when I left."

Philippa held out her hand. She had been looking curiously at their visitor.

DOUGLAS WADE seconded his sister's efforts to put the Pole at ease.

"Good evening, Talak!" he said. "You remember you told me you wanted to talk to Miss Wade, and I told you she was ill? Well, you see she is able to be out again now."

"Dat's good!" the man mumbled.

With a nod, Douglas turned and went into the house, and as the sound of his footsteps died away the Pole spoke abruptly.

"Mr. Butler, he give me money. Where is he?"

Elizabeth replied promptly, pressing her hands hard together.

"In jail."

The man started convulsively.

"De oder gentleman said he's arrested and couldn't come here. He didn't tell me he's in jail."

"That is where they put him for killing Mr. Chapin," the girl said bluntly.

"Killing Mr. Chapin?" the Pole gasped.

"Yes," Elizabeth went on. "You and I know, Talak, that Mr. Butler did not kill Mr. Chapin. But he will be punished for it."

There was a tense silence, then the even voice continued: "Mr. Butler will be killed unless the man who shot Amos Chapin confesses."

"I shot Amos Chapin!"

The words were sudden and unexpected, and the listener scarcely suppressed an exclamation of consternation. There was a subdued rustle at the window, then silence.

"How did you do it, Talak?"

The question was uttered so casually that the listening physician wondered at this girl's self possession.

"Wid old Chapin's gun."

"With his gun? Where did you get it?"

"He kept it in a closet in the house. I seem him put it dere de night after he shot Nig. I watched to see, 'cause I wanted to kill him like he killed Nig."

"But you did not have the gun when Mr. Butler and I met you on that afternoon that you went away from here," the girl said.

"Yes, I did, too. I put it in de bushes when Mr. Butler called me."

There was a long silence. Then:

"Where is the gun now?" the girl asked softly.

"I hid it. I did not want folks to know I killed old Chapin. But I can't let Mr. Butler stay in de jail, or get killed for me. Dat's why I tell you. You get him out of jail. He can tell de police I done de shooting."

"Suppose," the girl ventured hopefully, "that you tell my brother to tell Mr. Butler. I am not well enough to go into Midland yet. Douglas!" she called before Talak could protest, "will you come out here, please? Talak has something to say to you, and something he wishes you to attend to for him."

All sense of personal danger seemed to have left the Pole. Elizabeth had been right when she said he was capable of but one idea at a time. As Douglas appeared in the doorway, the self-confessed murderer spoke doggedly.

When a Girl Marries

By ANN LISLE

JUST as we were finishing our canteloupe a big red-haired girl, wearing stunning sport-clothes, a lot of make-up and an air of being interested in everything, came swinging in with a handsome gray-haired man of great distinction. He had reckless, moving eyes of dark blue.

"Devil-may-care Irishman," I said to myself.

Before any one could offer introductions he crossed to Jim's side. Then I observed my husband.

"Hello, Jim. How's Jeanie?" asked the gray-haired man in a voice with a lilt in it.

"How are you, Dalton?" returned Jim, curtly. "Virginia is very well."

Evvy's voice broke the tense silence that held us all.

"Come here, 'Handsome' Pat Dalton! I've a friend or two for you to meet."

Then she presented Miss Sturges and Mr. Dalton to the rest of us.

Mr. Dalton seemed to take a keen delight in making friends with Jim's friends. Betty and Terry responded to his undoubted charm, and agreed readily enough when he suggested a glass of wine. Of course they hadn't observed Jim's annoyance, and as I realized this I felt strangely happy. After all, none of Jim's friends knew all about him. Even I, his wife, must still come to know every phase of him, to weave all my knowledge into perfect intimacy.

When the wine glasses were put on the table I turned mine down, and then I felt ashamed of my conspicuous action when I saw him merely motion the waiter away.

All through the dinner the waiter kept filling and refilling Mr. Dalton's glass. Jim watched him rather scornfully as he tossed off drink after drink, but the other man kept well within bounds, and was so entertaining and charming that young Neal fairly hung on his words.

Miserably I watched my brother drink his second glass of champagne and saw the waiter fill his glass for the third time. I tried to signal Neal, but he refused to catch my glance. And my eyes caught Jim's—his face was cold and stern. First, Neal had offended Betty. Now he was making friends with the man Jim detested and drinking freely with him. And I was helpless to stop Neal.

Then a little twist of paper was thrust into my hand. I hid it under the edge of my plate and managed to read its message:

"Don't worry, dear. I won't let Neal drink another drop—and I'll break up the party soon. "E."

Gratefully I looked up and caught

Evvy's smile. After all she was a real friend. I felt that I could trust her.

Why Stay Fat? You Can Reduce

HINT FROM BEAUTY EXPERT

There is a sculptor in New York who has had one of the most interesting careers of any man in this country. At one time he was a ladies' hair-dresser. He later became an opera singer, thence drifted into farming in the great Northwest, and finally found himself in a sculptor's studio in one of the old parts of New York.

He is a man that never speaks unless he is sure of his subject. On the other hand, he is quite a society leader and from time to time has dropped hints among his lady friends on how they can beautify themselves and keep young looking. The other day at a studio tea, at which ten women of social prominence were gathered, he remarked how necessary it was for women to prevent having gray streaks in their hair. He also took a leaf from his experience and mentioned Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer as being the truest and most reliable remedy he knew of to restore hair that showed signs of gray.

"It seems strange," he said, "that I who had been in the business of hair-dressing would denounce dyeing the hair and advocate this restorer." But those who knew the gentleman appreciated his sincerity.—Advertisement.

HOTTEST 30TH OF OCTOBER ON RECORD

Boston's Indian Summer Principal Topic of Conversation; Rain Tonight

Here's today's heat record: [illegible]

The hottest October 30 in the history of the Weather Bureau established [illegible] years ago.

Boston's Indian Summer, [illegible] what you will, has changed the [illegible] topic of conversation from "Is it chilly enough for you?" to "Is it warm enough for you?"

It was an uncomfortable night for sleeping under blankets, and persons wearing their [illegible] expressed the wish that the Weather Man would send the [illegible] weather where it belongs.

He will.

The announcement for today is that the "hot spell" will be broken tonight by rain, followed by cooler weather. This is the forecast:

"For Boston and vicinity: Probably local rains tonight and Thursday. Cooler, with moderate south to west winds."

The temperature record since 1 a.m. showed a steady rise of many degrees, as follows:

1 a. m.	66
2 a. m.	68
3 a. m.	67
4 a. m.	67
5 a. m.	67
6 a. m.	67
7 a. m.	67

PEDESTRIAN HAS EQUAL RIGHT WITH DRIVER

The rights of a driver of an automobile on a public highway are not superior to those of a pedestrian, says Chief Justice Rugg in an opinion of the full bench of the Supreme Court, which sustains the exceptions of the plaintiffs in suits brought by [illegible] W. [illegible] and Gladys [illegible] Wilson against George [illegible] Miller.

The two girls, who were between seventeen and eighteen years of age, were returning to their homes in Reading about 10 o'clock on the night of March 26, 1917. The sidewalk of Main street being [illegible], they were walking in the middle of the roadway. While getting out of the way of an approaching electric car, they were struck by the automobile of Miller, who was returning from Haverhill to Boston, he at the time being engaged in war work.

At the trial the evidence showed that Miller was running a fifty-six horse power touring car at a speed of from thirty-five to forty miles an hour, although he claimed to be going at the rate of not more than twenty miles. Miss [illegible] sustained a fractured skull and Miss Wilson, who was carried [illegible] feet by the machine, had a leg broken. Judge John F. Brown ruled that the plaintiffs were not in the exercise of due care, and directed a verdict for Miller.

Chief Justice Rugg said:

"There can be no question that there was sufficient evidence of negligence on the part of the defendant. He was violating St. 1909, c. 534, sections 15, 16. The speed at which he was driving might have been found to have been excessive and dangerous to other travelers. If the defendant had been traveling at a lawful rate of speed the girls would have reached a place of safety. Even if they did not pursue the wisest course in the light of what happened, that is not decisive against them."

LUNCH PROPRIETOR FINED ON MILK CHARGE

On the charge of having milk below the standard, the [illegible] Company of [illegible] street, operating a chain of restaurants under the name of the Waldorf Lunch Company, was fined $[illegible] today by Judge [illegible] in the Municipal Court. The company pleaded not guilty and appealed the case. Complaint was brought by Dr. Jordan of the Milk Inspection Bureau.

Six Months for Having Drug

[illegible] of [illegible] road, Malden, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction in the Chelsea Court today for having morphine in his possession. He appealed and was held in $[illegible] for the Superior Court.

THE GETTING-WELL STAGE OF GRIP

Most Dangerous Period—How to Gain Strength

The long pull in getting over the grip demands that all the organs of the body be kept in their best working form, not only to drive out the poison left by the grip germ, but that the patient shall regain strength as soon as possible to avoid further attacks resulting from the poisons in the system, paralyzing the greater part of the tissues of the body and the organs which they compose.

Forced nutrition is a means toward good health after the grip—as it is a means of preventing the entrance of the grip germ to the system. Father John's Medicine builds up the body because it is all pure nourishment and free from opium, morphine, chloroform or other poisonous drugs. Father John's Medicine has had 60 years' success for colds and throat troubles, coughs and sore throats, and as a tonic and body builder.

WHY RUN-DOWN PALE EXHAUSTED WOMEN SHOULD TAKE IRON

"There can be no beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked, steady nerved women without iron. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks their charm and attractiveness depart. I always insist that my patients take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—(not metallic iron which often corrodes the stomach and does more harm than good). Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard women in two weeks' time in many cases. I have used it in my own practice with most surprising results."—Ferdinand King, M.D., well-known New York Physician and medical author. (Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded—On sale at all good druggists.)

GAFFNEY RESCUES BRAVES

Bondholders to Be Paid as Result of Action by Former Club Owner of the others of the owners of the club would meet the interest payment.

SMALL CHANCE OF SALE.

Much has been written regarding the possible sale of the Braves and many have been named as prospective owners of the outfit. At the present time the club has not been sold and the chances of selling it at the terms offered by those owning it seem remote indeed. George T. Stallings, for several years manager, has been in Boston and New York for the better part of a month in a vain effort to dispose of the franchise.

Among others mentioned as prospective magnates is James M. Curley, former mayor of the city. Curley does not, at the present time, intend to head any syndicate that will assume control under the conditions at present advanced. Those who have in the past advanced money to finance the proposition have decided to do so no longer.

James E. Gaffney acquired the Braves in 1912. He had but trifling success with the venture that season, but in 1913, with Stallings as manager, met with considerable more. In 1914 the club surprised the world by winning the pennant. Their successes during 1913 and 1914 had been such as to clearly indicate that the little bandbox in Columbus avenue was entirely unsuited for the club's demands. Consequently Mr. Gaffney and those associated with him sought a new site.

NEW OUTFIT COST $900,000.

They secured the land in Commonwealth avenue for a sum in excess of $300,000. They entered into negotiations and erected the handsome plant at a cost, for construction work, in excess of $500,000. Other charges brought the total invested sum up to more than $900,000. To finance this hugh project bonds were issued to the extent of $900,000. Of this total Mr. Gaffney and Robert Davis, associated with him, acquired about $300,000. Thus they secured the controlling interest in the Commonwealth Realty Company.

Today there are more than $500,000 worth of bonds outstanding. The bonding was done through the banking firm of Millett, Roe and Hagen, of which Arthur C. Wise is the Boston member and representative. From time to time this concern has disposed of the bonds, but only with varying success. At the present time there are numbers of them to sell, but no takers.

The big park was opened during the 1915 season and during the winter that followed it, Mr. Gaffney surprised the baseball world by announcing the sale of the club to a syndicate headed by Percy D. Haughton, Arthur C. Wise and Ralph Hallett, the latter a banker. That announcement was nominal. These men were not sold the club.

In reality the transaction was between Messrs. Gaffney and Davis, for the club, and the firm of Millett, Roe and Hagen as the actual purchasers. This firm later handed the stock over to the Haughton syndicate, but has actually held its interest throughout all the tempestuous times that have marked the club's progress since the 1915 season. Haughton received a yearly salary of $15,000.

FAILED TO MEET PAYMENT.

When the new owners took charge of the club's affairs they entered into an agreement with the former owners whereby they were to pay an annual rental of $45,000, which was to be used to pay the interest on the bonds. This rental was to be paid in the shape of three payments of $15,000 each. In the event of any more of the bonds being sold the sum paid would be greater, but would not fall on the club. On the contrary the additional sum would be met by Messrs. Gaffney & Davis.

The last payment was due on September 1 of this year. It was not met on that date and bondholders were informed that under the law which allowed two months of grace they could take no action toward collecting their interest, prior to November 1. Failure to have paid the interest on or before that date would result in several interesting situations.

For example, the bondholders might form a committee and seek action toward forcing the company into bankruptcy. Then would follow an auction of the property, with a distinct loss to every one. The present owners have done nothing toward obviating that action. From time to time they have informed Mr. Gaffney or his legal representatives, John Conway Toole of New York and Alfred L. Fish of Boston, that they expected to sell the club at any time and thus meet outstanding obligations.

GAFFNEY MAY SUE.

Having met the club's obligations today, the next step in line for Mr. Gaffney is to enter suit against the present nominal owners of the club for the money he and Mr. Davis have paid in. Unless they see fit to meet the obligation and refund the money paid in today, prior to November 1, such a suit will be entered. In the event of Mr. Gaffney's winning the suit, the property will revert to him.

He will protect whatever other bondholders there may be following that action. The then owners of the Braves franchise, whoever they may be, will be in the position of owning a ball club with no place in which to play their games. In that way it might be that Boston for the first time in years will be without a National League club playing.

All sorts of rumors have been forthcoming from New York regarding the business affairs of the club. If they [illegible]t all true it would seem as though [illegible] would be a new set of owners here in Boston before the national pastime is once more going.

Among others the story has been told that the club is burdened by a number of other debts in addition to that owed on the bonds. The National League, of which John Heydler is the present head, has been appealed to by several persons for payment of their claims. Ball players and others identified with the organization have filed claims for salary due from the time baseball suspended, in September, until the end of their contract year.

FRANCHISE IN DANGER.

Failure of a club to meet its contractual obligations as well as other legitimate debts would result in the forfeiture of its franchise by the league. The league would then be in position to do with that franchise as it saw fit. It would unquestionably be restored to Boston, but the league would see to it that persons financially sound and equal to the task of conducting a baseball organization were the owners of it.

Mr. Gaffney stated today that at no time had he publicly stated that he would assume control of the club. He said that on one occasion he met a New York baseball writer in that city and discussed baseball matters with him. Among other things he stated that the game would need a thorough changing about before it would be in position to start again.

He stated that John Heydler would, in his opinion, make an ideal head for the National League. He then discussed the Boston club, stating that obligations were in existence which must be met on or before November 1. He further stated that failure of the present owners to take action would result in his taking it. He did not state that he would again take over the club.

DUNDEE WINS IN FAST GO WITH CALLAHAN

By H. W. LANIGAN.

Johnny Dundee, duly famous New York lightweight, as fast, brilliant and crafty a glovesman as the Queensberry world owns, had his hands full getting the award over Frankie Callahan in their twelve-round muss at the Armory A. A. show at the Arena.

It was a sizzling close decision Referee Conley was called upon to render; he favored Dundee when he adjudged him the winner. It was a near draw, an out-and-out draw, thought many most capable judges. As for Callahan, Daniel McKettrick, his modest manager, and Frankie's followers—well, they are confident Dundee was given a present.

In the fourth round, and again in the seventh, Dundee was artistically laced by Callahan; in fact, for several seconds in each chapter it looked as if Johnny would go down and stay down. Callahan rained in stiff uppercuts with his right and shot several robust ones of the same species to the little Italian's jaw.

In both sessions Dundee was in dire distress. Incidentally, this super boxing man wiggled through both assaults, and truth it is that when the two periods ended, Dundee was no more tired than Callahan—nor any more used up.

It was a busy battle from start to finish, as satisfactory a twelve-rounder as has been rendered in Boston in a long, long time. Dundee has been resting since his last bout here with Young Britt. Though he came into the ring with his bruised optic bandaged, that was all camouflage. The wound was healed, as was proven when the plaster popped off in an early round.

At two stages of last night's rumpus, the fourth and seventh cantos, as has already been mentioned, Callahan was within inches of flooring Dundee. Likewise was Frankie within inches of Dundee at the final bell. But the verdict went Dundee's way and while Conley's call might have been thoroughly correct, a draw would have been generally voted proper.

CYCLONE JOHNNY THOMPSON beat Rudy Unholz in eleven rounds at San Francisco. The Boer was helpless on the ropes and the police stopped the affair. Rudy took the count twice in the eleventh before the cops interfered. Johnny Murphy and Lew Powell fought a corking twenty-round draw at the same club. The boys battled every minute of the time. (Fancy one of our present-day fighters going twenty rounds at top speed. Good night!)

"KID" HERBERT of Kentucky writes the AMERICAN, asking for a bout with Jack (Twin) Sullivan, Marvin Hart, Billy Papke or Stanley Ketchel. Herbert recently fought Hart a twelve-round draw. (One thing you have to give Herbert credit for—he wasn't picking out any dead ones.)

AL DELMONT of the North End, matchmaker of the Cape Ann A. C. of Gloucester, has arranged a snappy card for Nov. 4. Tommy Reilly of New York, will meet either Jimmy Hanlon of the West End, or Eddie Carr of South Boston. Joe Budreau is slated to go on in one of the preliminaries against Young Sharkey. (Next time I see Joe I must ask him how he came out.)

JOHNNY HAYES, winner of the recent Marathon race at the Olympic games, London, will compete at the big Marathon race to be held at Madison Square Garden about Thanksgiving time. The other entries are Dorando, the Italian flyer; Tom Longboat, the Indian, and Al Shrubb, noted English runner. The full Marathon distance—26 miles, 385 yards—will be run. (Marathon running was quite a craze at that time and the runners who took part must have been as—use your own judgment.)

BILLY GLOVER of South Boston and Young Erne went six fast rounds with honors even at Philadelphia. Erne had the better of the first three rounds, but Glover evened up matters in the final chapters.

PACKY McFARLAND says he'll fight Battling Nelson twenty-five rounds for the championship of the world, but won't fight him forty-five rounds. (Remember, we said something about them never meeting. Now we know why.)

Bub Whalen Is a Giant and Happy Is Naval Squad at Harvard

A tough scrimmage was looked for this afternoon when Harvard's army and navy teams lined up on Soldiers' Field. Wednesday is generally a big day on the Crimson's gridiron and at least sixty men were looked for in the combined squads.

The Stadium was to feel the caress of Harvard football cleats for the first time this Fall, as heretofore the Naval Radio team has been using the field for afternoon practice.

The new order of affairs at the pen-tapper's station, which calls for a matutinal drill in place of the after-dinner Swedish gymnastics exercises, makes this possible, as the wireless boys henceforth are to gambol on the Stadium greensward from 10 to 11:30 a. m.

Bub Whalen, a 260-pound guard, is getting lots of attention from Philbin, line coach, as well as player, on the naval team. The sailors need weight and are nursing along Whalen, who is a novice. A couple more huskies like this big man and the naval unit need fear no service team in New England.

BEFORE DAN McKETTRICK, Callahan's manager, returned to New York, he told the boomers of the Mattie Baldwin benefit Frankie would be on hand for the show, if wanted. McKettrick also stands willing to pit Joe Jeannette against Kid Norfolk. Joe Woodman likewise offered both Langford and Barney Snyder to the committee in charge.

SILK O'LOUGHLIN, famous American League umpire, now in the War Department's employ, and at present stationed in Boston, was in a ringside seat. "How would I have called the Dundee-Callahan bout?" buzzed back Silk. "Say, don't you know that us arbitrators have a league and we're never wrong?"

It follows: Soldier Kroll of Fort Baldwin, Me., vs. Billy Carney of New Bedford, twelve rounds; Johnny Gray of Chelsea vs. Girard Gianni of Lawrence, eight rounds; Young Leonard of Chelsea vs. Eddie Ransom of Framingham, six rounds; Buddy Dolan of Lawrence vs. Mike Donnelly of Framingham, six rounds.

President Wilson Appeals for Election of Walsh of Massachusetts, Reed and Jameson of New Hampshire and O'Shaunessy of Rhode Island

The President Believes That the Control of the Senate by His Political Opponents Would Discredit Him and His Work in the War Throughout the World, and Would Cast Him Down From the Position of Leadership Which His Intellectual and Moral Force Has Attained

There never was a clearer issue than that between David I. Walsh, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, and John W. Weeks, Republican candidate for the same office.

Ex-Governor Walsh served the Commonwealth two years as Governor so satisfactorily that there is no man in the State today who can fairly question his fidelity and capacity as a public servant in a most important office.

Let us waive for the moment all that has been said concerning the political methods of Mr. Weeks, and let us assume without reserve that he likewise is a competent and faithful public servant according to his lights and under the restrictions which his associations, past and present, impose upon him.

The issue, then, is more or less impersonal. It involves fundamentally a vote of confidence or lack of confidence in President Wilson as the representative of the nation in the conduct of the war and in the great principles which he has from time to time formulated, not only for this country BUT FOR THE WORLD—principles which have been heard and applauded by the nations as the voice of America, upon the supposition that the people of America were behind their great President.

If any American citizen who is familiar with history will reflect a moment on this issue, he will realise that to elect a Congress controlled by the party hostile to President Wilson at this critical juncture, when he stands the acknowledged head of all the statesmen of the entente world—and at the very moment of victory, when the enemy, selecting the President as the acknowledged leader, avows a willingness to accept his PRINCIPLES OF PEACE—for the American people, in such a situation, to pass a vote which foreigners must inevitably interpret as a vote of want of confidence in their President would be one of the most extraordinary things that has ever happened in recorded history.

However WE might understand or explain it, no explanation of such a change in the political control of Congress would be accepted by the world outside except that the American people had failed to sustain those masterful presentations of ideals and principles set forth by President Wilson which have been accepted by the thoughtful world and have made him the leading statesman of the twentieth century.

A vote of want of confidence in the President now through electing a hostile majority in Congress would be like defeating Abraham Lincoln in 1864.

The leading Republicans of the country, led by Roosevelt, are already aggressively attacking the President for conducting any negotiations at all with Germany. They have long chafed in secret at some of the principles which he has laid down for the settlement of this terrible war, though they have not heretofore dared openly to attack those principles because they know that the American people heartily approve of them and because they have seen how eagerly these principles have been accepted by the thoughtful, forward-looking people of the whole world, arrayed in arms against Germany. This group of Republicans, led in the Senate by Lodge and followed blindly by Weeks, have used such language during the last few days toward the President and his attitude toward the necessary settlements with the enemy—and have used it with the outspoken or tacit approval of the party managers and the party organs—that the election of every Republican Senator, in view of the fact that he will have to vote on the peace treaty, can not fail to be construed as a repudiation by such a Senator's constituents of those wise policies of the President which are so potent an influence in hastening a just and lasting peace.

Only the other day Roosevelt, attacking the last note of the President to Germany, declared that he was sick of this attempt to substitute the click of the typewriter for the roar of the cannon. As if there were anybody but Roosevelt and a lot of war profiteers, represented by some of the men now in the Senate, who would not want to stop this war AS SOON AS AMERICA'S OBJECTS CAN BE FULLY ACCOMPLISHED! If by substituting the click of the typewriter for the roar of the cannon we can SAVE HALF A MILLION OR MORE OF AMERICAN BOYS FROM PREMATURE GRAVES, AND YET GAIN EVERY OBJECT WE ENTERED THE WAR TO ACHIEVE, what American father or mother, sister, brother or wife, would not say "AMEN!" to the President's noble efforts to save useless bloodshed.

Senator Lodge, backing up Mr. Roosevelt, says he does not want any discussion with Germany concerning terms of peace until we have conquered the German armies; he talks of conquering these armies as if it could be done with a breath. True, we CAN conquer the German armies; nothing is more certain than the ability of the entente allies under Marshal Foch to accomplish that fearful task. But, IF WE OFFER THE GERMANS NOTHING BETTER THAN DEFENDING THEMSELVES TO THE LAST DITCH, we shall only conquer them, we shall only get even as far as the Rhine, after hundreds of thousands of American boys have been slain, wounded or maimed.

If Germany is now ready for peace, knowing that she must in the end be absolutely conquered if she further resists; if the great middle and working classes are really taking the reins of power into their own hands and directing the German peace overtures—if Germany, disillusioned, disheartened and war worn, is willing to make peace upon the President's terms and subject to the arrangement of the necessary military safeguards by the military chieftains of the entente allies—what American is there, except a blind, bitter political partisan, who would hamper the President in his noble efforts to accomplish America's objects in the war without further unnecessary bloodshed?

Can there be any doubt that the election of John W. Weeks would be a repudiation by the people of Massachusetts? What could be more reasonable and more patriotic than President Wilson's appeal to his fellow-countrymen not to hamper him with a hostile Congress?

> *"If you have approved of my leadership," he writes, "and wish me to continue to be your unembarrassed spokesman in affairs at home and abroad I earnestly beg that you will express yourselves unmistakably to that effect by returning a Democratic majority to both the Senate and the House of Representatives. * * **
> "This is no time either for divided counsel or for divided leadership. Unity of command is as necessary now in civil action as it is upon the field of battle. If the control of the House and Senate should be taken away from the party now in power an opposing majority could assume control of legislation and oblige all action to be taken amidst contest and obstruction.
> *"The return of a Republican majority to either House of the Congress would, moreover, certainly be interpreted on the other side of the water as a repudiation of my leadership. * * **
> *"The peoples of the allied countries with whom we are associated against Germany are quite familiar with the significance of elections. They would find it very difficult to believe that the voters of the United States had chosen to support their President by electing to the Congress a majority controlled by those who are not in fact in sympathy with the attitude and action of the administration. * * **
> "If in these critical days it is your wish to sustain me with undivided minds I beg that you will say so in a way which it will not be possible to misunderstand either here at home or among our associates on the other side of the sea. WOODROW WILSON."

This is nothing more nor less than good, plain common sense, and must be recognized as such by every American who is not blinded by partisan spirit or lust for power and office. None ever recognized it more clearly than Roosevelt, Lodge, Penrose and their partisan allies recognized it in 1898, when in a far less critical juncture, in the war with a tremendously outclassed and unsupported antagonist, Theodore Roosevelt wrote of the congressional elections:

> "Remember that, whether you will or not, your votes this year will be viewed by the nations of Europe from one standpoint only. They will draw no fine distinctions. A refusal to sustain the President this year will, in their eyes, be read as a refusal to sustain the war and to sustain the efforts of our peace commission to secure the fruits of war. Such a refusal may not inconceivably bring about a rupture of the peace negotiations. It will give heart to our defeated antagonists; it will make possible re-interference of those doubtful neutral nations who in this struggle have wished us ill."

Senator Lodge declared even more emphatically:

> "There is one question that seems to me to override all others. It is whether we shall stand by the administration and the President at this juncture. If we give a victory to his political opponents we say not only to the United States, but we say to the world, we say to the Spanish commissioners in Paris, that the people of the United States repudiate its result and repudiate the man who has led victoriously the war and is now leading us back to peace—William McKinley."

And Senator Penrose added:

> "The President has appealed not to a partisan but to a national spirit. It is difficult to overestimate the supreme importance of sustaining the President of the United States and the Republican party at the present critical crisis in our foreign relations."

Ex-President Harrison also joined the chorus of party leaders, saying:

> "If word goes forth that the people of the United States are standing solidly behind the President, the task of the peace commissioners will be easy, but if there is a break in the ranks—if the Democrats score a telling victory, if Democratic Senators, Congressmen and Governors are elected—Spain will see in it a gleam of hope; she will take a fresh hope and renewal of hostilities; more war may be necessary to secure to us what we have already won."

It WAS necessary to support the Republican President, McKinley, in 1898 by giving him a Republican Senate and House of Representatives. It was still more essential to give Abraham Lincoln the backing of a Congress of his own party in 1862. It is as much more vitally important to give Woodrow Wilson the encouragement and indorsement for which he asks as the present national and international crisis is more vitally important than either of these.

NEW ENGLAND IS NOT BEHIND THE REST OF THE NATION EITHER IN PATRIOTISM OR IN COMMON SENSE. NEW ENGLAND CANNOT AFFORD TO FAIL TO RESPOND TO PRESIDENT WILSON'S APPEAL BY SENDING TO THE SENATE HIS TRUE AND LOYAL SUPPORTERS, WALSH OF MASSACHUSETTS, REED AND JAMESON OF NEW HAMPSHIRE AND O'SHAUNESSY OF RHODE ISLAND.

Col. Roosevelt Is Excited.
Brewing Trouble for 1920.
Our War Is No Failure.
And Americans Know It.

By Arthur Brisbane

Long ago Voltaire said: "The thing in the world which it is perceived that one can most easily do without is an Emperor."

"Amen," say Austria and Germany.

The Kaiser is said to have expressed a desire to become president of a German republic.

But when people decide that an emperor is something they can do without they also decide what to do with the emperor. This the unfortunate Russian Czar discovered. He planned to go to his estates in the south and work in his garden. "I am very fond of my flowers," said he. Now, poor man, flowers are growing out of what is left of him.

There are ugly mutterings in the armies of Austria and Germany, old men of the German landsturm sent to the front in spite of their age, weary of war and hunger, are saying, "We shall have something to do when we get back in Berlin." That something will perhaps not be pleasant for autocracy.

The Austrian Emperor, in his latest message, says practically, "do anything you please, cut up my land into independent kingdoms, one for each of the forty nationalities in my dominions, if you will BUT LET ME HAVE PEACE."

And with all this Colonel Roosevelt, who has been fighting Wilson, while Wilson has been fighting Germany, tells us that it is necessary to elect a Republican Congress "TO WIN THE WAR."

It is a free country, each man can vote as he pleases. But the average American had an idea that America was winning the war already.

Colonel Roosevelt makes charges against the President that would land a little Socialist editor in jail in twenty-four hours. Read, for instance, this extract from Colonel Roosevelt's speech: "The world would be better off now by hundreds of thousands of fearless lives and many billions of dollars of treasure, if Mr. Wilson had been willing to supplement his own self-sufficient ignorance by the counsel of those who would gladly have counselled him wisely, but who would not creep into his presence as slaves."

The wise counsellors that would not creep, include Colonel Roosevelt, presumably.

One paragraph from Colonel Roosevelt's speech may come home to roost unpleasantly in 1920. We refer to Colonel Roosevelt's personal and intensely insulting reference to the President. Colonel Roosevelt said it was small wonder that in the cloakrooms of the House the bitter jest circulates: "Here's our czar, last in war, first toward peace, long may he waver."

There are hundreds of men locked in detention camps for offenses less serious than that.

When two million American soldiers come back from France, they will not report that Woodrow Wilson was a czar, or last in war, or that he wavered.

It may turn out Colonel Roosevelt in his attacks on the President of the United States in war times is serving the Republican party about as well as he did when he started the Bull Moose fire and cooked poor Mr. Taft.

If it be true, as Colonel Roosevelt asserts, that in the cloakrooms of the House, Republican members circulate insults belittling the President of the United States, what becomes of Colonel Roosevelt's statement that the Republicans "have loyally supported Woodrow Wilson?"

Is it loyal support to say that the commander-in-chief of the United States army and navy is a czar, "last in war, first toward peace, long may he waver?"

Do you wonder that the President, responsible for the ending of this war, and for important legislation dealing with difficult and dangerous problems of unemployment and lower wages after the war should request that the people send to Washington men who will co-operate with him in the difficult work that the people have given him to do?

What Colonel Roosevelt calls "bitter jests," the people of the United States will call shameful, disloyal insults.

The Attorney-General of the United States has put men in prison—and properly—for statements such as Colonel Roosevelt in a speech attributes to Republican members of Congress.

The Attorney-General might well demand of Colonel Roosevelt the names of those circulating such treasonable statements, and take action against them, if not against the Colonel who repeats the insults, and gives them publicity in every newspaper in the United States.

Bismarck and the Peace of 1871

By Morton Birge

THUS Bismarck was only voicing the very precautions for a permanent peace that President Wilson and our allies insist must be taken ere the present war be brought to an end.

A moment later Bismarck said:

"We desire peace, but it must be a lasting peace, and under the conditions which I have already mentioned. The fortune of war has placed the best soldiers and the best officers of the French army in our hands; to restore them to liberty of our own free will would be madness, and would prolong the war."

When General Wimpffen threatened to renew the battle Bismarck urged:

"But of what use will that be? You will have achieved no more tomorrow evening than you have today, and you will only have upon your conscience the blood of your soldiers and of our own which you have shed so uselessly."

Bismarck to Regnier

Pertinent to the present situation, now that the Germans plead for armistice, is a statement made by Bismarck to Regnier, a Napoleonic agent, on September 20, 1870, as follows:

"Our position is as follows: With whom can we negotiate and what can be offered us? It is our firm determination to utilize the present situation so as to avoid another war with France in the future, or at least for a very long time to come; therefore, a rectification of the French frontier is indispensable to us. Moreover, we are confronted by two governments, one de facto and one de jure; we cannot alter their position, and it is difficult, if not impossible, for us to negotiate with either of them."

Bismarck asked: "With whom can we negotiate?" The insistent Prussian Chancellor sought a settlement that would not be shifted.

President Wilson's brief reply of October 8 to Prince Max of Baden concluded thus:

"The President also feels that he is justified in asking whether the Imperial Chancellor is speaking for the constituted authorities of the empire who have so far conducted the war. He deems the answers to these questions vital from every point of view."

Men Enough to Wait

Bismarck also said to Regnier at that same meeting:

"We can easily wait. We have 400,000 men here, living on the occupied and conquered districts; when Metz and the other towns have surrendered, we shall have 500,000 to 600,000 men; they can bivouac in this way throughout the Winter. As soon as we are met by a government 'de facto et de jure,' which is able to negotiate on the basis proposed by us, we shall negotiate. For the present we have no occasion to communicate our demands regarding the cession of territory, since the suggestion has been declined in toto."

In other words, Bismarck did not propose to be led into the tangle of diplomatic parley over what Germany might demand in certain contingencies. He didn't propose even to talk about it. He was the arbitrary Prussian, master of the situation and adamant to the weakening enemy.

At a second meeting with Regnier Bismarck uttered a dictum that now applies to Prince Max. It was this injunction to Regnier:

"FIND US SOME ONE WITH WHOM WE CAN NEGOTIATE, AND YOU WILL RENDER YOUR COUNTRY A GREAT SERVICE."

Practical Man

Bismarck used the term "practical man" in another conference with Regnier, thus:

"I am surprised that you, who appear to be a practical man, after going to Metz with the certainty of being able to return without any anxiety regarding your papers—a thing which has never before been sanctioned—should return without a more formal proof of your capacity for negotiation than a signed photograph of the Marshal and a letter to his wife, which, as I gather from its contents, it is agreed that you should answer. But, my dear sir, I have been a diplomat for more than twelve years and this is not enough for me."

To Be Continued.
